Introduction

The New York State Unified Court System has published this booklet to give tenants without a lawyer information about what to do if a landlord starts an eviction. Similar court system booklets give landlords without a lawyer information about what to do in order to bring eviction cases in court.

The two most common reasons a landlord wants to evict a tenant are:

1. The tenant has failed to pay the rent;
2. The tenant's right to stay in the rental property has ended, but the tenant has failed to leave.

When one of these things happens, a landlord may start a lawsuit called a Summary Proceeding. There are two types:

- Nonpayment Summary Proceeding. The landlord claims the tenant failed to pay the rent.
- Holdover Summary Proceeding. The landlord claims the tenant failed to leave the rental property after the right to remain in the property ended.

In these two types of Summary Proceedings, the landlord will ask the judge to grant a Judgment that will allow the tenant to be evicted. The judge may also order the tenant to pay past due rent to the landlord.

This booklet can help if your landlord starts a Nonpayment Summary Proceeding or a Holdover Summary Proceeding against you. You may also want to ask for help from the Court Clerk's Office, which may be able to answer some of your questions about the lawsuit. Please keep in mind, however, that court staff are not allowed to give legal advice, and so may not be able to answer all of your questions.

If you feel you need legal advice at any time during your case, talk with a lawyer. If you cannot afford a lawyer, or are unsure how to find one, these resources can help you:

- Go to www.lawhelp.org/ny;
- Call the New York State Bar Association Lawyer Referral Service (toll free) at 1-800-342-3661;
- Go to www.nycourthelp.gov and click on "Lawyers";
- Go to www.nycourts.gov/attorneys/nybarassociations.shtml;
- Ask at any courthouse about lawyer referral services.

Which Courts Handle Nonpayment Summary Proceedings and Holdover Summary Proceedings?

The landlord must start the case where the rental property is located.

Rental Property Location	Court
Village .....	* Village Court
Town .....	Town Court
City .....	City Court
Nassau County .....	District Court
Part of Suffolk County with District Court .....	District Court
Part of Suffolk County without District Court . . .	Town or Village Court

* If a village does not have a Village Court, the summary proceeding can be started in the Town Court of the town that surrounds the village.

If you are a tenant that is a corporation or a voluntary association, you must be represented by a lawyer when a landlord starts a Summary Proceeding against you in a City Court or a District Court.

However, if the landlord starts a Summary Proceeding against a tenant that is a corporation in a Town Court or a Village Court, the tenant may choose either to have a lawyer answer the case in court or, if not, to have any authorized officer, director or employee appear in court instead.

What to Look for Before the Case Starts

Nonpayment Summary Proceeding

Before your landlord can start a Nonpayment Summary Proceeding to evict you for failing to pay the rent, your landlord must ask you to pay the past due rent. This is called making a Demand for the unpaid rent.

There are two types of “demands.” The landlord is allowed to use either one:

- Oral Demand. Your landlord must speak to you in person and ask you to pay the past due rent.
- Written Demand. Your landlord must have someone give you a written notice demanding that you pay the rent or leave the rental property. See pages 5 and 6 of this booklet for the rules on delivering or “serving” court papers in a Summary Proceeding.

After the landlord makes a Demand, you have three days to pay the rent before the landlord can start a Nonpayment Summary Proceeding in court.

If you pay the entire amount of the past due rent to your landlord within those three days, your landlord no longer has the right to begin a Nonpayment Summary Proceeding against you.

Important Note:

- A landlord may start a Nonpayment Summary Proceeding against a tenant even if the tenant pays the entire amount of the past due rent within the three-day period. If that happens to you, your rent receipt will be a crucial piece of evidence when you go to court to stop the eviction. Be sure to get a rent receipt when you pay the rent and bring it with you when you go to court.

Holdover Summary Proceeding

- When There is a Lease or Other Rental Agreement. If you have a lease or other rental agreement that states when your rental term ends, you must leave the rental property at that time unless you and your landlord make a new agreement.

If the lease or other rental agreement is not renewed and you stay in the rental property after the end date, your landlord can begin a Holdover Summary Proceeding against you without notifying you that the lease or other rental agreement has ended (unless the lease or agreement says that your landlord has to give you notice).

- When There is No Lease or Other Rental Agreement. If you are renting the property without an agreement about how long you can stay, your landlord must give you a Notice to Terminate before starting a Holdover Summary Proceeding. This notice tells you the day when you must leave the rental property.

There are two types of Notices to Terminate. The landlord is allowed to use either one:

- Oral Notice to Terminate. The landlord speaks to the tenant in person, tells the tenant that the right to occupy the property has ended, and tells the tenant the date the tenant must leave.
- Written Notice to Terminate. The landlord has someone give the tenant a written notice telling the tenant that the tenant's right to occupy the property has ended and giving a date when the tenant has to leave. See pages 5 and 6 of this booklet for the rules on delivering or "serving" court papers in a Summary Proceeding.

A Notice to Terminate must allow you to stay in the rental property for at least one full rental period before you have to leave. For example, if you are renting month-to-month and your landlord wants you to leave the rental property on June 30th, the landlord must give you the notice no later than May 31st.

If you stay in the rental property after the date contained in the Notice to Terminate, your landlord can begin a Holdover Summary Proceeding in court.

How Does a Summary Proceeding Start?

The Nonpayment Summary Proceeding and the Holdover Summary Proceeding both start the same way: with a Notice of Petition and a Petition.

- Notice of Petition. This court paper tells you the name and address of the court where the landlord is bringing the case and the date and time for you to appear in court.
- Petition. In this court paper, the landlord gives you and the judge information about your rental property and why the landlord wants to evict you.

If your landlord wants to evict you because you have not paid the rent, the Petition must list the months when you did not pay the rent and the total amount of rent due.

“Serving” the Court Papers

There are only three ways that a Notice of Petition and Petition in a Nonpayment or Holdover Summary Proceeding can be delivered or “served” on a tenant. A Written Demand and a Notice to Terminate also should be served in one of these three ways.

- Personal Delivery. The person who serves the papers must first try to give the papers to the tenant personally, by giving them to the tenant in his or her hand. The papers can be handed to the tenant anywhere.
- Substituted Service. If the person serving the papers tries to serve the tenant at home and the tenant is not present, the server can give the papers to the person who answers the door as long as (1) the person resides in the apartment; and (2) is of an appropriate age and has appropriate judgment to take the papers. By the next business day, the server must mail two copies of the papers to the tenant, one by regular mail and one by certified mail.
- Conspicuous Place Service (“Nail and Mail”). If the person serving the papers is unsuccessful on the first try to serve the papers either by personal delivery or substituted service, then he or she must make a second attempt during a different time period. For example, if no one is home during working hours (9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.), the server can return at 7:30 p.m. during non-working hours. After two unsuccessful attempts have been made to serve the person at home either by personal delivery or substituted service, the server may then use conspicuous place delivery. This is also known as “Nail and Mail.”

“Nail and Mail” requires that a copy of the papers be attached to the door of the actual residence of the tenant or be slipped under the entrance door of that residence. By the next business day, the server must mail two copies of the papers to the tenant, one by regular mail and one by certified mail.

Important rules about “serving” the court papers:

- The landlord cannot serve the court papers himself or herself. The person who serves the papers must be over 18 years of age and not involved in the proceeding.
- The court papers cannot be served on a Sunday, Sabbath day, or any other day of religious observance.
- The person who serves the court papers must complete an Affidavit of Service form for each person served. The completed Affidavit of Service must be notarized and submitted to the court within three days of the personal delivery or mailing.
- The Notice of Petition and Petition must be served on the tenant no more than twelve days and no less than five days before the court date shown on the Notice of Petition.

If the papers are not served as described above, you may tell this to the court clerk or judge as a Defense to the Summary Proceeding. You will read more about Defenses later in this booklet.

Filing an Answer

You have been served with the landlord's Notice of Petition and Petition. What happens next?

1. You must appear in court on the date and time indicated in the Notice of Petition. If you don't, you are likely to lose the case and be evicted.
2. You must "answer" the Petition. There are two ways to do this:
  - Oral Answer. On the day you appear in court, tell the clerk or judge in your own words if you agree or disagree with the statements made by your landlord in the Petition. You may also tell the clerk or judge about any Defenses and counterclaims you may have to the proceeding. You will read more about Defenses later in this booklet. The court clerk or the judge will write down your Oral Answer on the petition so that the court has a record of it.
  - Written Answer. This is a written document that tells the judge if you agree or disagree with the statements made by your landlord in the Petition. The written answer also may contain your Defenses and counterclaims to the Petition. You will read more about Defenses in the next section of this booklet. A copy of the Written Answer must be sent to the landlord or to the landlord's lawyer, if your landlord has one, and to the court, along with an Affidavit of Service that shows how you sent a copy to the landlord.

Generally, the Oral Answer or Written Answer can be made on the date you are supposed to come to court. However, if the landlord wants you to provide an Oral Answer or Written Answer before the court date, the landlord must include a demand that you answer by an earlier date in the Notice of Petition. In order to demand that you answer by an earlier date, the landlord must serve the Notice of Petition and Petition at least eight or more days before the court date.

A tenant should always appear on the court date even if he or she did not answer the demand in the Notice of Petition. The judge may still accept an Answer from the tenant on the day your case is scheduled.

Filling in the Answer Form

The Answer form and instructions for preparing it are in the Forms and Instructions section of this booklet. Before you begin to fill in the form, however, you should think about whether you have any Defenses to the landlord's claims.

If the judge accepts one or more of your Defenses, the judge may dismiss the Summary Proceeding. That will stop the eviction.

Some of the more common Defenses are described below. If you believe that one or more of these are true in your case, you should check  them on the Answer form. There is also space on the form to describe other Defenses.

Common Defenses

- Your landlord did not make a Demand for the rent or did not have you served with a Notice to Terminate;
- Your landlord did not follow the rules for having the Notice of Petition and Petition served on you;
- The person named as the “Petitioner” on the case papers (usually the landlord) is not a person who is allowed to file the Summary Proceeding;
- The amount of claimed past due rent is wrong;
- The landlord owes you money for a rent overcharge;
- You have already paid some or all of the past due rent;
- You offered the rent to your landlord, but your landlord refused to accept it;
- There are conditions in the rental property that make it unsafe and/or unliveable.

Important Note

- If you believe you have a Defense, it is important to come to court and tell the court clerk or judge what the Defense is. You can tell the court clerk or judge about these Defenses (and others you may have) even if you are giving an Oral Answer instead of a Written Answer.

What Happens in Court?

You must appear in court on the date and at the time specified in the Notice of Petition. If you fail to appear on the court date, the judge is allowed to decide in favor of your landlord without hearing your side of the story. The judge may give your landlord a money judgment against you and may give your landlord the right to have you evicted from your rental property.

Bring all of your evidence to court with you. This might include, for example, rental receipts, a lease or other written agreement, or photographs of the condition of the rental property. You can bring witnesses to tell the judge about your rental property or about your landlord.

When the court clerk or the judge announces your case, say that you are present. Then follow the clerk's and the judge's directions.

The judge may ask both you and your landlord if you are the people named in the Notice of Petition and Petition. The judge may also ask other questions to see if there is any possibility of a Settlement, in order to learn whether you or your landlord would like to work with a mediator or if a trial will be necessary.

What is the Difference between Settlement, Mediation and Trial?

- Settlement. A Settlement is an agreement between you and your landlord about the case. The terms are determined by you and your landlord. For example, you may agree to pay the past due rent if the landlord agrees to make repairs to the rental property. Or, your landlord may agree to let you stay in the rental property for a certain time period so that you can find another place to live. You and your landlord may agree to have the judge enter a Judgment against you, allowing the eviction, but delaying when it will happen.

In some courts, a Settlement is called a Stipulation and Agreement. The judge may read the agreement aloud while you and the landlord are in court to avoid any misunderstanding on your part, your landlord's part, or the court's part about what each party has agreed to do.

- Mediation. In some courts, you and your landlord can agree to have a mediator handle your case instead of the judge. A mediator is a professional, neutral person who is trained to help you and your landlord come to an agreement about your dispute without the need for a judge to decide it.
- Trial. If you and your landlord cannot settle the case, the judge will hold a trial. During the trial, your landlord will give evidence to show why you should be evicted. The judge will give you a chance to ask your landlord questions about the landlord's evidence. The judge also may ask questions. Then you will have the chance to present evidence, including any witnesses you may have. The judge will give your landlord a chance to ask questions about your evidence and also may ask you questions about it. After you and your landlord have offered all of your evidence, the judge will make a decision.

The Judge's Decision

If the judge decides the case in your favor, the judge will dismiss the landlord's lawsuit against you. This means that your landlord cannot have you evicted in this lawsuit.

If the judge decides the case in favor of the landlord, the judge will give your landlord a Judgment.

If your landlord's case was a Nonpayment Summary Proceeding, the Judgment will give your landlord the right to have you evicted and to take back possession of the rental property. The Judgment also may give your landlord the right to collect past due rent.

If your landlord's case was a Holdover Summary Proceeding, the Judgment will give your landlord the right to have you evicted and to take back possession of the rental property.

Even if your landlord wins a Judgment, you can ask the judge to delay or "stay" the date when you have to move in order to give you time to find another place to live.

Only a sheriff, constable, marshal, or other enforcement officer — not the landlord — can evict a tenant after the landlord wins a Judgment. A landlord must get a Warrant of Eviction from the court, then ask a sheriff, constable, marshal, or other enforcement officer to use the Warrant of Eviction to evict the tenant.

Important Note:

- The sheriff, constable, marshal, or other enforcement officer must notify you at least 72 hours in advance, in writing, that you will be evicted if you do not leave the rental property. If you do not leave the rental property by the deadline in the written notice, the sheriff, constable, marshal, or other enforcement officer is allowed to remove you and your possessions from the rental property.

Procedures After a Judgement

Stopping an Eviction After a Judgment

Even after the judge gives the landlord a Judgment allowing you to be evicted, you may make a written request to the court that the eviction be “stayed” or delayed, and that the case be reopened. To do this, you must submit two forms to the court: (1) an Affidavit in Support of Order to Show Cause and (2) an Order to Show Cause.

Affidavit in Support of Order to Show Cause:

In this form, you must explain, in writing, why you believe the judge should sign the Order to Show Cause. Several common reasons why a tenant may be entitled to an Order to Show Cause:

- 1. You failed to come to court. If you did not appear in court on the day your case was scheduled to be heard, the first thing to do is to contact the Court Clerk’s Office to find out what happened in court.

If the judge gave your landlord a Judgment allowing the landlord to evict you, you can request that the judge issue an Order to Show Cause in order to schedule another court date to give you an opportunity to present your side of the case. In the Affidavit in Support of Order to Show Cause, you must show two things: (1) a good reason for not going to court when you were supposed to, such as: “I never received the court papers” or “I was sick”; and (2) a good defense against the Landlord’s claim in the petition, such as, “I paid part or the full amount” or “I need repairs.”

- 2. You want to pay the past due rent. You may ask for an Order to Show Cause for the judge to allow you to pay the past due rent and to stop the eviction.

Bear in mind that paying the past due rent after a Judgment and Warrant of Eviction have already been issued does not stop the eviction unless you get a court order.

- 3. You have another reason (besides failure to come to court or paying the rent) why you think the judge should reopen your case. You must ask the judge to give you an Order to Show Cause. In the Affidavit in Support of Order to Show Cause, you will need to explain your reason(s) why the case should be reopened.

If the judge agrees with the information in the Affidavit in Support of Order to Show Cause the judge may sign and issue an Order to Show Cause.

Order to Show Cause

If the judge grants your request for any of the above reasons or for any other reason, he/she will sign and issue the Order to Show Cause which will “stay” or delay the eviction. The Order to Show Cause will include instructions about the date and time when you and your landlord must appear in court. Be sure to come to court on that date.

The Order to Show Cause will also tell you when and how the court papers must be served on your landlord or your landlord’s attorney. You are not allowed to serve the court papers. A person at least 18 years of age must serve the court papers and must complete an Affidavit of Service form for each person who was served. If the judge has already signed a Warrant of Eviction, you also must have the sheriff, constable, marshal, or other enforcement officer served with the Order to Show Cause. (The Court Clerk’s Office can tell you if a Warrant of Eviction was already signed.) You must file the Affidavit of Service with the court after you receive it from the person who made service.

Sample Order to Show Cause, Affidavit in Support of Order to Show Cause and Affidavit of Service forms and instructions are included in the Forms and Instructions section of this booklet.

Appeals

You and the landlord both have the right to appeal the judge’s decision to another court if you disagree with it. If you want to appeal, discuss this promptly with the Court Clerk’s Office because there are strict time limits that must be followed.
